Authentic assessment for an inquiry-based classroom

Can you easily think of 10 effective ways to assess students during your next unit of inquiry? This hands-on workshop will address sound assessment theory through practical application, and will focus on designing and producing assessment materials using real classroom examples from a range of grade levels.

- How can I assess progress in science? language? mathematics? social studies?
- How can I assess development of attitudes? transdisciplinary skills?
 - What should go into a portfolio?
 - What is a rubric?
 - What makes assessment authentic?
 - Can it be authentic for all cultures?
 - Can we assess understanding?
 - How do we assess inquiry-based learning?
 - Where does assessment fit in the planning and teaching process?
 - How can I build in student self-assessment?
 - What research can we draw on to help us make assessment more effective?
 - How can students contribute when we're designing assessment tasks?
 - How can we maintain standards without standardised testing?
 - Is it important to have an agreed schoolwide system?

PUTTING IT INTO PRACTICE
IN ALLIANCE WITH
TEACHER TRAINING ACADEMY-TÜRKIYE

Putting it into Practice is an independent integrated programme providing practical support to teachers and schools worldwide. Drawing on 25+ years of experience of good educational practice, our workshops offer high-quality professional development opportunities for globally-minded educators covering all aspects of primary education and whole-school management through an extensive range of modules which, together with a substantial databank of support materials, provides a comprehensive training & implementation system. We have directly supported more than 200 schools worldwide, organising and leading inservice training workshops, courses and conferences and acting as consultants on a wide range of topics. Our Primary Inquirer School membership gives your school ongoing access to our support materials, enabling you to become more effective and efficient in the delivery of your programme.

Workshop leaders Lesley & Kenneth Snowball

Educational Director, Lesley Snowball, is a special education, language and curriculum specialist with extensive experience as a teacher, administrator, consultant and workshop leader worldwide. Recent key roles have included director of The International School of Budapest, Head of Lower School/Deputy Director with the International School of Amsterdam (the first authorised PYP school in the world) and founding director of Putting it into Practice. She has also been closely involved with Project Zero initiatives, ECIS International Teacher Certification and as an adjunct professor with George Mason University developing and teaching FastTrain and IB studies courses. She is a graduate of Durham, London and Bath Universities and is on the Board of the Alliance for International Education. Co-director Kenneth Snowball has a background in engineering and systems development and has been involved in international education for 15 years providing design & training support for a range of international organisations. Together Kenneth & Lesley were part of the team responsible for the original development, publication and implementation of the IBO PYP, and now provide training and support to more than 200 schools worldwide through their Putting it into Practice initiative.
